Personality and inter-personal skills are fundamental to BHP's success and are just as important as academic ability – our clients expect to deal with approachable, responsive people who communicate at their level and instinctively understand their commercial concerns; people who will go that extra mile to find a solution and offer them the very best support and advice.

All routes are delivered via a fully supported training agreement, which covers the costs associated with your professional training, including a generous amount of study leave to attend tuition, revision and the exams themselves during the daytime, delivered in partnership with our key training providers.
